

7 Contemporary Ceramicists to Collect

ARTSY SPECIALIST JUL 9TH, 2018 9:05 PM

Ceramicists continue to push this centuries-old medium forward, discovering new shapes, new techniques, and new subjects to capture in clay. From Cody Hoyt's angular vessels to Roberto Lugo's activist portraits, discover fresh pieces to add to your space. To buy any of these works, you can click on the image to contact the gallery directly.

Linda Lopez

Through her playful, porcelain "dust furry" sculptures, Lopez shows that inanimate objects can have personalities of their own.

Linda Lopez Blue Dust Furry with Gold Lint, 2018 Mindy Solomon Gallery

Linda Lopez Pink/ Navy Dust Furry with Cut Outs, 2018 Mindy Solomon Gallery

Linda Lopez Yellow Dust Furry with Gold Rocks, 2018 Mindy Solomon Gallery

Cody Hoyt

Hoyt combines hand-marbling with slab-based construction to create angular, colorful wonders—and some are as small as four by five inches.

Cody Hoyt Truncated Tetrahedron Vessel, 2017 Patrick Parrish Gallery

Katie Stout

From hand-pinched clay lamps to mirrors supported by acrobatic nudes, Stout's ceramics are filled with a whimsical sense of humor.

Katie Stout Unique "Girl Mirror" in painted ceramic, 2017 R & Company

Katie Stout and Sean Gerstley U Lamp, 2015 Nina Johnson

Katie Stout Unique table lamp in gold ceramic, 2018 R & Company

Jo Taylor

For her swirling structures, Taylor finds inspiration in architectural ornamentation, from elaborate plaster ceilings to wrought iron gates.

Jo Taylor Pride & Joy Blue I, 2017 Cynthia Corbett Gallery

Jo Taylor Pride & Joy Yellow I, 2017 Cynthia Corbett Gallery

Roberto Lugo

Lugo imbues his pottery with social activism, using the shapes of Victorian era fine china to portray people of color, from Kendrick Lamar to Gwendolyn Brooks.

Roberto Lugo Pulitzer: Kendrick and Gwendolyn, 2018 Wexler Gallery

Roberto Lugo Portrait Plate: Ghostface Killah, 2015 Wexler Gallery

Roberto Lugo A Century of Gangsters, 2018 Wexler Gallery

Merete Rasmussen

Rasmussen twists and curls her clay sculptures by hand, creating looping abstractions that are reminiscent of biological forms and mathematical equations.

Rose Eken

For her most recent series, Eken recreated everyday objects from counterculture movements around the world, including cell phones, champagne bottles, and lemons (an antidote for tear gas).

Rose Eken Blackberry, 2018 V1 Gallery

Rose Eken Oysters and Lemons, 2018 V1 Gallery

Rose Eken Asti Abbrasia, 2018 V1 Gallery